

CONFERENCE CONTEXT of 14th ANNUAL IFEC

The COVID-19 pandemic has been affecting the global economy since 2020, with a series of stimulus, economic aid packages, and other policy responses implemented by governments to combat the spread of the disease and to survive the recession.

The unprecedented event serves as momentum to rethink an economic system that is stable, resilient, inclusive, and sustainable, along with a strong social safety net system. Rapid digital transformation supported by the rise of the sharing and collaborative economy has also contributed to a more effective and efficient resource allocation. This development has shaped a new normal for the Global Islamic Economy, which requires breakthrough initiatives and innovations to strengthen the ecosystem of the Islamic Economy that synergizes Islamic Finance, Islamic Social Finance, Halal Industries, and Islamic Businesses, to achieve Inclusive, Resilient, and Sustainable Growth.

Islamic finance has further advanced its position as a mainstream value proposition with an increasingly global presence.

We as an industry still face many challenges of a new kind. There is a need to increase the scale of business locally. There is a need to prepare our products and services to adapt and comply with more robust regulatory and risk frameworks. There is a need to enhance our talent pool. There is a need for people to accept us as a commercial endeavor instead of a religious one. There is a need to focus on doing the business instead of just talking about what is Shariah compliant and not compliant. There is a need to build international linkages through absolute acceptance and respect of all the different Islamic finance undertaking done under various Shariah school of laws in different iurisdiction to further accelerate its development as a public good that delivers true economic value.
